Hunger pains

Life inside foodbank Britain

Kayleigh Garthwaite, Durham University

“We’ll only truly understand UK hunger when we listen to the people experiencing it. This book paints a moving picture of the stark realities of food poverty. It’s an important read.”

David McAuley, CEO of the Trussell Trust

“In this accessible and powerful book, Kayleigh Garthwaite gives voice to the people behind the data, explaining in a precise and well-informed way the very human tragedy that our current crisis of poverty represents.”

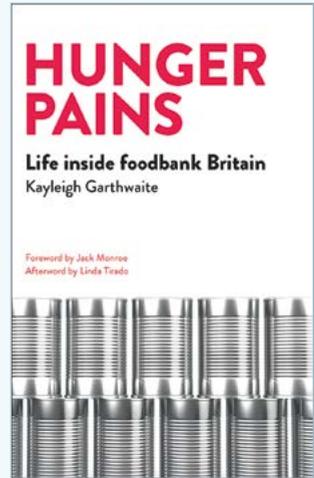

Julia Unwin, CBE, Joseph Rowntree Foundation

“Written with remarkable clarity and compassion, anyone who wants to participate in the conversation about foodbanks, from cabinet ministers to foodbank volunteers, would do well to read this book.”

Janet Poppendieck, author, Sweet Charity? and Professor Emerita of Sociology, Hunter College, City University of New York, and Senior Fellow, CUNY Urban Food Policy Institute

What does it feel like to be forced to turn to foodbanks for help? What does it take to get emergency food, and what’s in the food parcel? Anna and her 11 year old daughter Daisy are eating out-of-date food since Anna had to leave her job due to mental health problems. Glen speaks of the shame he feels using the foodbank having taken on a zero hours contract. This is a powerful insight into the harsh reality of food poverty from the inside.

Contents: Foreword Jack Monroe, Introduction Researching foodbank use Foodbanks: what do they do? The politics of foodbank use in the UK Why do people use a foodbank? All work, low pay: finding, keeping, and doing precarious jobs ‘Doing the best I can with what I’ve got’: food and health on a low income Stigma, shame and ‘people like us’ Is foodbank Britain here to stay? Afterword Linda Tirado

“A compelling though disquieting read showing the unblemished reality of living in Food Bank Britain today”

Isabella, Dole Animators

“There were no foodbanks in the UK in the 1970s – we had no need of them. Kayleigh Garthwaite carefully describes a tragic disaster that was entirely avoidable and which could be ended within just a few years.”

Danny Dorling, Oxford University

Substance not spin

An insider's view of success and failure in government

Nick Raynsford

“As a serving minister, Nick Raynsford always distinguished between good politics and good policy, and could spot a bad policy from afar. That same common sense permeates these pages.”

Andy McSmith, Political journalist and author of No Such Thing as Society – a History of Britain in the 1980s

“Restores faith in the hard working politician, challenges the machinery of Whitehall and offers a route to renewed public confidence in government”

David Montague CBE, CEO L&Q Housing Trust

Why does policy succeed or fail? Nick Raynsford, a former MP, Minister and campaigner, tells us how it looks from the front line of policymaking. Based on his vast personal experience at the very heart of government and the voluntary sector, this insider's view explores what works and what doesn't in making and implementing policy and legislation with insights on a range of events, some not previously made public, during his time in government.

Offering solutions as to how obstacles in policymaking and implementation can be overcome which will help to restore trust and much-needed confidence in government and the political process, this is a fascinating bridge across the policy and practice divide.

Contents: The problem; Homelessness; The irresistible rise of Housing Benefit; Why we don't build enough homes; Does it fly?; A mayor for London; The slow road to devolution in England; The transformation of Hackney; 'This won't take much of your time'; Wasted opportunities; Conclusions.

“A fascinating read from one of the wisest and best informed ministers we have had in recent times. Essential reading for anyone interested in the challenges of delivering good government.”

Lord Bob Kerslake, former Head of the Civil Service

“An honest, thoughtful and detailed inside account covering an eclectic set of issues, with important insights and radical proposals for change.”

Margaret Hodge, DBE, MP

From greed to wellbeing

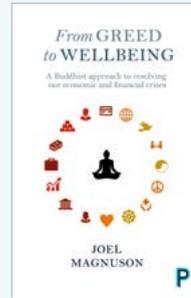

A Buddhist approach to resolving our economic and financial crises

Joel Magnuson, Portland Community College

“Joel Magnuson skillfully applies Buddhist teachings to quench the flames of greed, hatred, and delusion that are consuming our world.”

Christopher Queen, Harvard University

Despite fitful attempts over decades at reform, the global financial system seems caught in cycles of boom and bust, instability and scandal. In this timely new book, Joel Magnuson builds on the classic works of E F Schumacher to provide a Buddhist economic perspective on this recurring pattern, and offers new possibilities for real change.

Rebuilding social democracy

Core principles for the centre left

Edited by Kevin Hickson, University of Liverpool,
Preface by Lord Hain of Neath

“A perceptive contribution to debates about the Labour Party which now faces a crisis of existence as a serious political force.”

Lord Neil Kinnock

The British Labour Party is in crisis and without a clearly defined set of aims and values. Rebuilding Social Democracy is the first major reappraisal of social democracy and thinking on the centre-left since the election of Jeremy Corbyn.

With a Foreword by Lord Peter Hain, it examines the key foundational principles of social democracy in order to find a route back to political credibility for Labour. Written by leading academics in the field, it identifies the values and objectives needed to revive left and centre-left thought and practice in Britain as an alternative to Conservative austerity.

Social Policy Review

The human atlas of Europe

A continent united in diversity

Dimitris Ballas, University of Sheffield,
Danny Dorling, University of Oxford and
Benjamin Hennig, University of Oxford

“An insightful look at today’s Europe through the underlying realities that Europeans live every day brought to life in charts and maps that reveal the human geography of this vitally important area of the world.”

Robert B. Reich, University of California at Berkeley

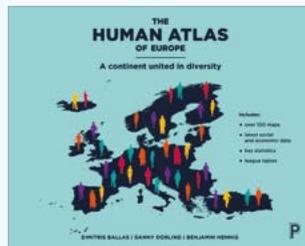

- Over 150 maps on a wide range of topics
- Stunning layouts that highlight key statistics in an illuminating way
- Ground-breaking cartography presenting Europe as a single entity

What does Brexit actually mean for the UK and what are the wider implications for Europe? Was the UK ‘leave’ vote actually symptomatic of broader issues within Europe such as population mobility and the rise of non-traditional parties?

Written by leading international authors, this timely atlas explores Europe’s society, culture, economy, politics and environment using state of the art mapping techniques following on from the previous Social atlas of Europe. It addresses fundamental questions around social cohesion and sustainable growth as Europe negotiates the UK’s exit while continuing through the economic crisis.

Taken as a whole, the atlas shows how geographical and state boundaries only tell a partial story and that we still live in a far more cohesive Europe than we realise.

Contents: A. Introduction, B. Population, C. Wealth and Poverty, D. Health, E. Education, F. Work, G. Environment, H. Politics, I. Identity and Culture, J. Policy, K. Conclusion

“A striking visual map of a dynamic and rapidly evolving Europe.”

Choice (about the previous The social atlas of Europe)

“Once again this innovative group of academics open our eyes to something hidden in plain sight. This time, with refreshing accessibility, it is the way we see Europe. A must read!”

Reclaiming feminism

Challenging everyday misogyny

Miriam E. David, UCL Institute of Education

“Excellent panoramic view of what fifty years of feminism has done, or can ever do for women, in both the academic and the real world.”

Michele Hanson, Guardian journalist and author of What the Grown-ups Were Doing

“This panoramic view of the five waves of feminism shows that despite more females than males in higher education, 21st century campuses continue to be plagued by misogyny, neo-liberalism and laddish behaviour.”

Jane Grant author of In the steps of exceptional women, The Story of the Fawcett Society 1866–2016

“David writes accessibly, punctuating her political and sociological commentary with personal reflections that are elegantly informed, and underpinned by her long career as feminist academic and activist.”

Emma Rees, Times Higher Education

Miriam David celebrates the achievements of international feminists as activists and scholars and provides a critique of the expansion of global higher education masking their pioneering zeal and zest for knowledge.

Looking at the changing zeitgeist, David contends that feminism has yet to have an enduring influence, despite how generations of women have felt empowered. She illustrates the power of patriarchal social relations and how everyday sexism or misogyny is keenly felt.

Contents: A feminist activist reflects on a lifetime in academe; Writing a life history of feminisms in changing times; Vintage Feminists: pioneers in higher education?; Gender and Generation: No permanent waves?; Educating feminism or cultivating feminists?; The resurgence of feminisms in the 21st century; Feminist Contestations on campuses around the world; Feminist Reflections for a Feminist Friendly Future.

“Not only is this book a deeply moving memoir of a prominent feminist life – it also deals with topical issues like sexual harassment on campus which concerns young women today.”

Professor Heidi Safia Mirza

Health divides

Where you live can kill you

Clare Bambra, Durham University

With a Foreword by Danny Dorling

“A major, readable new statement that captures crucial insights from a new wave of political epidemiology. Health Divides will change the way you think about health and illness.”

Professor Jason Beckfield, Harvard University, USA

“Brilliantly demonstrates how increasing geographical and social health inequities stem from policy decisions and how different political choices could reduce them.”

Professor Louise Potvin, University of Montreal, Canada

“A highly accessible text that provides a forensic investigation into how and why geography matters for health and inequalities ... Profoundly important.”

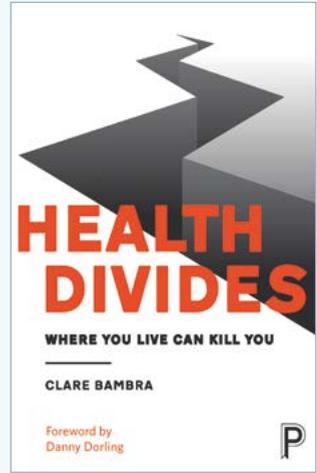

Professor Jamie Pearce, University of Edinburgh, Scotland and Co-Editor, Health and Place

“Bambra’s razor sharp, timely and comprehensive analysis should be read by anyone concerned about inequality.”

Mary O’Hara, Guardian Journalist and author

Clare Bambra, a leading expert in public health, draws on case studies from across the globe to examine the social, environmental, economic and political causes of health inequalities, how they have evolved over time and what they are like today. Revealing gaps in life expectancy of up to 25 years between places just a few miles apart, this important and accessible book demonstrates that where you live can kill you.

Contents: Foreword – Danny Dorling; Health Divides; From King Cholera to the C Word; In Sickness and In Health; Placing Life and Death; It’s the (Political) Economy; Too Little, Too Late; Past, Present, Future.

“This clearly written book, full of striking examples from around the world, shows that geography is as relevant for population health as ever.”

Professor Johan Mackenbach, Erasmus Medical Center, Netherlands

“An excellent overview of the importance of geography for public health.”

Narcissistic parenting in an insecure world

A history of parenting culture 1920s to present

Harry Hendrick, University of Warwick

“Meticulously researched, vigorously argued, glitteringly provocative – and sure to spark robust debate.”

Alan Prout, University of Leeds

In this provocative history of parenting, Harry Hendrick analyses the social and economic reasons behind parenting trends. He shows how broader social changes, including neoliberalism, feminism, the collapse of the social-democratic ideal, and the ‘new behaviourism’, have led to the rise of the anxious and narcissistic parent.

The concept and measurement of violence against women and men

Sylvia Walby, University of Lancaster, and colleagues

Available Open Access under CC-BY-NC licence. The book is a guide to how the measurement of violence can be best achieved. It shows how to make femicide, rape, domestic violence, and FGM visible in official statistics. It offers practical guidance on definitions, indicators and coordination mechanisms and sets new standards and guidelines to influence the measurement of violence in the coming decades.

The Rise of the Right

English nationalism and the transformation of working-class politics

Simon Winlow and Steve Hall,
Teeside University and James Treadwell,
Birmingham City University

“An unapologetically bleak account of contemporary Britain, cutting angrily and incisively through the thickets of liberal dogma. Essential reading.” Mark Carrigan, Digital Sociologist

“This brilliant book shows why the downfall of the left is a post-GFC and post-Brexit condition which, without action, could become permanent.” Steve Redhead, Flinders University, Adelaide, South Australia

This book aims to alter thinking about working-class politics and the rise of right-wing nationalism in the de-industrialised and decaying towns and cities of England.

The rise of the right among the working class, as shown in the shock Brexit result, the authors claim, is inextricably connected to the withdrawal of the political left from traditional working-class communities, and the left’s refusal to advance the economic interests of those who have suffered most from neoliberal economic restructuring.

Incisive, contentious and boundary-breaking, it uses the voices of those who now support far-right political groups like the English Defence League to address the total failure of mainstream parliamentary politics and the rising tide of frustration, resentment and anger.

Contents: Introduction; Dead Politics; The Fickle Parent; Redundant; The Hated Centre; The Scapegoat; Mourning and Melancholia in the EDL; Conclusion: Begin from the Beginning; Postscript – Brexit.

“A fast(er) moving novel take on how New Labour and the liberal left media created the circumstances in which the English Defence League would grow.” Danny Dorling, University of Oxford

“Critiques, questions, and debates the relationship between an unfair neo-liberal society, working-class people and the rise of the right”. Lisa Mckenzie, London School of Economics & Political Science

Imprisonment worldwide

The current situation and an alternative future

Andrew Coyle, University of London, Helen Fair, ICPR, Birkbeck, Jessica Jacobson, Institute for Criminal Policy Research and Roy Walmsley, World Prison Brief, ICPR

“The welcome publication of this excellent and thought provoking book will inform governments and parliaments worldwide about the limited role of imprisonment.”

Lord David Ramsbotham, former Chief Inspector of Prisons for England and Wales

Providing a comprehensive account of prison populations worldwide, this new work links prison statistics from the last 15 years with considerations of how prisons and prison populations are managed.

With commentary on what is meant by an ethical approach to the use of imprisonment, and how this can be sustained, this book is a major contribution to the knowledge of those currently debating prisons and the use of imprisonment, whether from academic, policy, practitioner, activist or lay perspectives.

Coercion and women co-offenders

A gendered pathway into crime

Charlotte Barlow, Lancaster University

This is the first book to explore coercion as a pathway into crime for co-offending women. It analyses four cases of women co-accused of a crime with their partner who suggested that coercive techniques had influenced their involvement in the offending. This fascinating book concludes by exploring the implications for public understanding of coercion and female offending more broadly.

Transforming probation

Social theories and the criminal justice system

Philip Whitehead, Teesside University

“The definitive account of [the Probation Service’s] recent past and the critically challenging one that is needed.”
Maurice Vanstone, Swansea University

This book explores the politics of modernisation and transformation of probation in the criminal justice system. It analyses changes in the probation service by including data from quantitative and qualitative empirical research. It uniquely provides insights into what representatives of other organisations think about probation – from the outside looking in.
