The story of Baby P

Setting the record straight

Ray Jones, University of London

“A remarkable book that brings balance and clarity to the murky interrelated world of press, politics and the police.” British Journal of Social Work

This book is the first to tell what happened to ‘Baby P’, how the story was told by the media and its considerable impact on the child protection system in England. This revised edition contains a substantial new Afterword bringing the story up to date.

Challenging the politics of early intervention

Who’s ‘saving’ children and why

Val Gillies, University of Westminster, Rosalind Edwards, University of Southampton and Nicola Horsley, Loughborough University

A vital interrogation of the accepted policy and practice consensus that early intervention is the way to prevent disadvantage. The book shows how early intervention policies underpinned by interpretations of brain science perpetuate gendered, classed and raced inequalities and will be welcomed by those looking for a positive, collectivist vision of the future.

Strengthening child protection

Sharing information in multi-agency settings

Kellie Thompson, University of Bedfordshire

“Will help all those concerned with achieving effective child protection to get high quality information sharing among professionals right.” Harry Ferguson, University of Nottingham

What prompts information sharing and how do we get it right? This accessible book challenges widely held assumptions about information sharing in child welfare that facts about risks to children are clear and that sharing them with other professionals is a straightforward process.
