Discovering, publishing and disseminating work that addresses local and global issues facing societies today

Bristol University Press (BUP) is proud to be part of the global university press community who ensure that excellent scholarship is published and used for public good.

"Our commitment to making a difference is unwavering through Policy Press' social justice work and BUP's focus on global social challenges."

ALISON SHAW, CEO,
BRISTOL UNIVERSITY PRESS

In an era of 'alternative facts' and 'fake news' it is vital that we challenge this with robust evidence and critical thinking from subject experts and ensure their work reaches and connects with readers.

Fundamentally we:

- provide excellent quality content, products and author service
- support new and emerging areas of scholarship and inter/trans-disciplinary work
- have an impact within and beyond academia.

Our publishing enables greater understanding of the social challenges we face and what can be done to bring about positive change.

Transforming Society

Our new Transforming Society blog celebrates bold thinking and helps to shape our understanding of social challenges.

Our mission has always been 'publishing with a purpose'. Transforming Society features articles, real voices, briefings for policymakers and case studies to help research have real impact, change policy and the way we see the world.

One feature of the blog is our new podcast series, where our authors will be talking about their research, ideas and some of the biggest issues of the day.

DISCOVER SOCIETY

We also co-publish Discover Society with the British Sociological Association.

This not-for-profit collaboration between sociology and social policy academics publishes bite-size pieces of social research, commentary and policy analysis.

BIG IDEAS

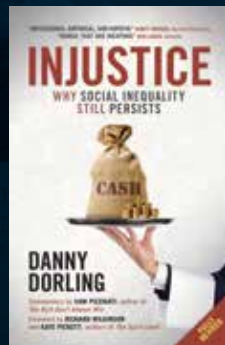

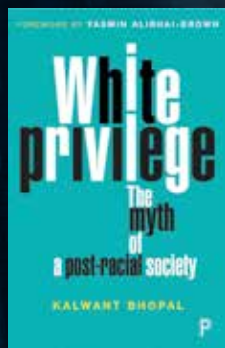

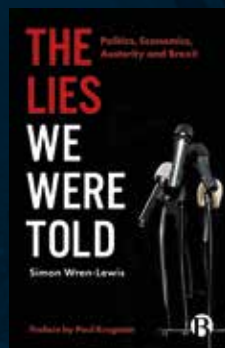

Books to change the way we think

Our 'Big Ideas' titles are intelligent, interdisciplinary books that present critical thought and evidence in a succinct and readable way to help to untangle contemporary social issues.

Published by both Bristol University Press and Policy Press imprints, these books aim to surprise, disrupt and change the way we think, addressing cross-cutting issues such as class, race, gender, politics and social inequality.

Aimed at thoughtful and engaged readers who want to challenge received opinion, these titles will help us to work towards a common cause of social justice.

The Happiness Problem

Expecting Better in an Uncertain World

Sam Wren-Lewis, Independent researcher

"What would wellbeing look like if it wasn't centred around increasing individuals' happiness? Wren-Lewis walks a fine line between positive psychology and the pessimism of its critics, and forges a path that's both complex and hopeful."

ANNA ALEXandrova, UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

"In this profoundly thoughtful and important book, Sam Wren-Lewis asks us to seek happiness by letting go, taking risks, and connecting with pain, failure and loss. This is an absolute must-read for anyone who is ready to tackle the deeper, more complex, and ultimately more fulfilling life."

BROCK BASTIAN, AUTHOR OF THE OTHER SIDE OF HAPPINESS

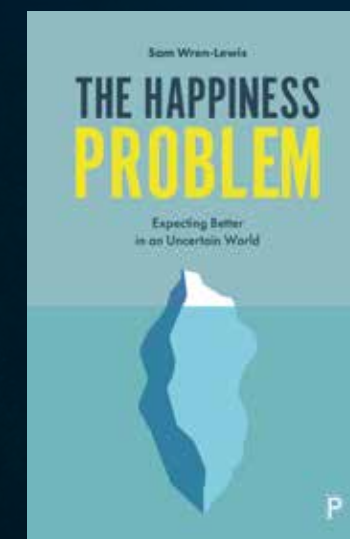

"This wise and engaging book punctures a toxic myth about happiness: that it is ours to choose. In its stead Sam Wren-Lewis offers an inspiring, and liberating, message of acceptance and understanding."

DAN HAYBRON, SAINT LOUIS UNIVERSITY, MISSOURI, USA

We appear to have more control over our lives than ever before. If we could get things right – the perfect job, relationship, family, body and mind – then we'd be happy. With enough economic growth and technological innovation, we could cure all societal ills.

The Happiness Problem shows that this way of thinking is too simplistic and can even be harmful: no matter how much progress we make, we will still be vulnerable to disappointment, loss and suffering. The things we do to make us happy are merely the tip of the iceberg.

Sam Wren-Lewis offers an alternative process that acknowledges insecurity and embraces uncertainty. Drawing on our psychological capacities for curiosity and compassion, he proposes that we can connect with, and gain a deeper understanding of, the personal and social challenges that define our time.

This fascinating photographic ethnography features stories and portraits of individuals across the UK who have been impacted by austerity, Brexit and a range of social issues and cuts to public services.

It captures and shares untold stories of hope and resilience from a diverse range of people, many of whom feel misrepresented in the media and out of sync with the government and politicians. Each story is told in the individual's own words and is accompanied by a portrait from an accomplished documentary photographer.

Commitment to sustainable Open Access (OA) publishing

Bristol University Press, and its imprint Policy Press, have long been supporters of responsible and fair open access. We are proud of our positive relationship with the academic community we serve, and we wish to see the work of our authors and contributors gaining as wide a readership as possible. We therefore support a publishing model which enables wider access to academic research, while continuing to place value on the publisher's role in producing the definitive version of authors' work.

As a publisher committed to making an impact in the real world, sustainable open access has obvious benefits, in particular:

- Improving visibility and impact: OA makes research more widely and easily visible if the content is discoverable and efficiently marketed.
- Enhancing collaboration: OA publication fosters greater dialogue across disciplinary and geographical boundaries.
- Advancing social justice: OA reduces inequalities in access to knowledge due to lack of institutional funding.

To browse all our OA books and articles go to bristoluniversitypress.co.uk/open-access-titles

Look for the Open Access symbol throughout the catalogue to see our forthcoming OA titles.

What we offer

We offer a range of flexible Open Access options for both journals and book publishing which continue to evolve, and we are always interested in working with our authors to explore new ideas.

Both Green and Gold options are available for all our journal and book content and we are flexible to allow for funder compliance.

Knowledge
Unlatched

For journals, our OA content is available to access on our IngentaConnect platform where it is clearly signposted.

Our OA books can be found on OAPEN and JSTOR and we are delighted to be a part of the Knowledge Unlatched collections.

We offer discounts on our standard Article Processing Charges (APCs) to researchers in developing countries and to those in institutions who subscribe to our journal collections.

We are also working with a range of partners to improve OA metadata distribution and discoverability of our OA content, an important issue in current OA debates.

Gold Open Access books receive the same high-quality treatment as any other book we publish. They are:

- subject to rigorous peer review at proposal and typescript stage.
- professionally copy-edited and proofread.
- produced with high-quality design and typesetting.

The ePDF version is Open Access and print copies are available to purchase.

Politics and International Relations

Our books continue to address the big questions and issues in politics around the world. Covering both international and domestic politics, political theory and political practice, our publications are diverse in approach and focus, but consistent in providing high-quality academic analysis.

Highlights this season include a range of new titles on Asian politics, including Ian Hall's essential account of how Indian foreign policy has changed under Narendra Modi, Fran Amery on the changing politics of abortion in the UK, and Richard Sawka's account of the tangled Russiagate affair.

Deception

Russiagate and the New Cold War

Richard Sakwa, University of Kent

"From one of the most perceptive scholars of Russian and international politics, this book tackles one of the biggest questions in world politics with verve, nuance and plain common sense".

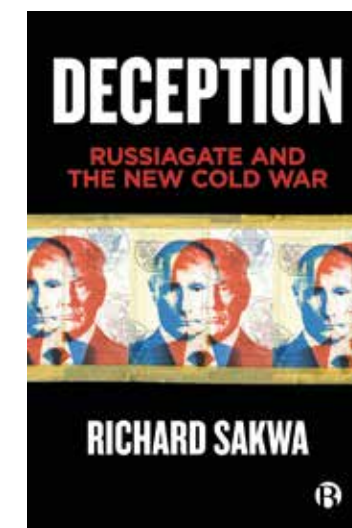

GRAEME GILL, UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

The 'Russiagate' affair is one of the most far-reaching political events of recent years. But what exactly was the nature and extent of Russian interference in the campaign that led to the presidency of Donald J. Trump?

Richard Sakwa sets out the dramatic series of events that combined to create Russiagate and examines whether together they form a persuasive account of Russian interference.

Examining the multiple layers in play, his analysis challenges some of the more overblown claims of Russian collusion and provides historical context to make sense of today's tensions.

As concerns rise about a New Cold War, this highly readable account is essential reading to understand contemporary East-West relations.

Series Editor: Yongjin Zhang, University of Bristol, Shogo Suzuki, University of Manchester and Peter Marcus Kristensen, University of Copenhagen

The Bristol Studies in East Asian International Relations series combines original research and theoretical innovation to provide fresh insight into the changing international politics of the region and into International Relations (IR) theory.

This major new series publishes cutting-edge research on the changing international politics of East Asia.

Areas to be covered include:

- security dynamics
- political economy
- causes of conflict and cooperation
- relations with the wider global order
- the ongoing transformation of the region

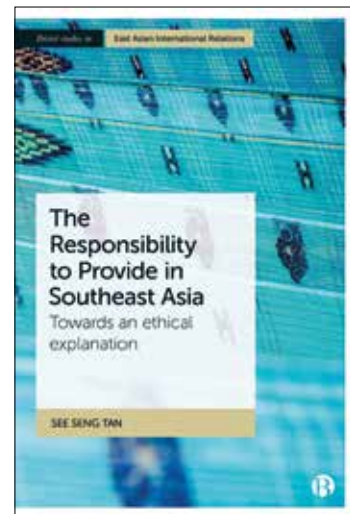

By drawing on rich insights from Asia, books in the series will shed fresh light on disciplinary debates and play an important role in developing IR as a truly global discipline

The Responsibility to Provide in Southeast Asia

Towards an Ethical Explanation

See Seng Tan, Nanyang Technological University

Innovative and theoretically rich, this original text argues that states in Southeast Asia have begun to display an increasing readiness to think about sovereignty in terms not only of state responsibility to their own populations, but also towards neighbouring countries. It explores what this means for the long-held and jealously guarded principle of non-intervention in the region, and for international relations more broadly.

Modi and the Reinvention of Indian Foreign Policy

Ian Hall, Griffith University

"A very well argued, thoughtful and historically astute reading of a new era in Indian foreign policy. Novel and refreshing, it will be a rewarding starting point for Indian foreign policy discussions."

PRATAP BHANU MEHTA, ASHOKA UNIVERSITY

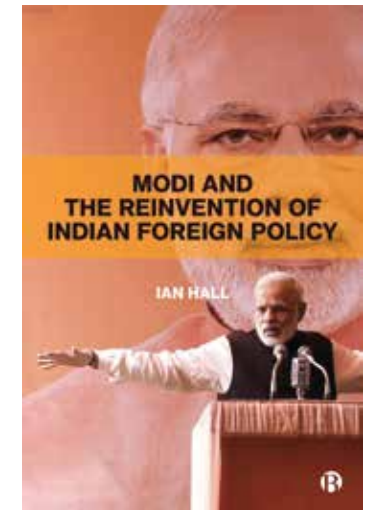

Narendra Modi's energetic personal diplomacy and promise to make India a 'leading power' surprised many analysts. Most thought he lacked the necessary experience in international relations, and had predicted that his government would concentrate on domestic issues, such as the growth and development demanded by Indian voters.

Instead, Modi's first term saw a concerted attempt to reinvent Indian foreign policy by replacing inherited understandings of its place in the world with one drawn largely from Hindu nationalist ideology.

Following Modi's re-election in 2019, this book explores the drivers of this reinvention, arguing it arose from a combination of elite conviction and electoral calculation, and the impact it has had on India's international relations.

"This is essential reading. Ian Hall brilliantly links the domestic imperatives driving current Indian foreign policy to the challenges India faces in a rapidly changing world."

Why Minor Powers Risk Wars with Major Powers

A Comparative Study of the Post-Cold War Era

Marinko Bobić, Leiden University

Spanning Iraq, Moldova and Serbia, Marinko Bobić breaks new ground in creating an original framework that can be applied to contemporary conflicts in Syria and elsewhere. Analysing offensive and defensive wars, the book examines the multiple pathways that drive minor powers towards war, alongside ways to mitigate conflict.

"Uses elite interviews and a multi-method approach to identify pathways that lead small states to challenge great powers."

Beyond Pro-life and Pro-choice

The Changing Politics of Abortion in Britain

Fran Amery, University of Bath

Providing an important examination of the processes through which abortion law has been negotiated and contested in Parliament and the implications for campaigners seeking to change the law, Amery makes sense of the changing pluralities of the abortion debate. Considering issues around sex-selective abortion debate.

Considering issues around sex-selective abortion, disability rights, pre-abortion counselling and the recent push for decriminalisation, she shows how it is necessary to move beyond a polarised understanding characterised simply by 'pro-life' and 'pro-choice'.

"A sophisticated account of the intricacies of the abortion debate for both students of Politics and Gender Studies and practitioners."

Our Impact

"It's been a genuine pleasure to work with such a professional and dedicated team, and to find a publisher with the right ethos for this book."

DAN HICKS, CO-AUTHOR OF LANDE: THE CALAIS 'JUNGLE' AND BEYOND

Why are we different?

Policy Press was founded 23 years ago on the passionate belief that all our work should contribute towards making a positive difference in society. With the establishment of Bristol University Press, that belief has, if anything, grown stronger, and we look at ways to make this a reality right from the original concept of the project through to its publication and beyond.

One effective method for societal change is the production of our Policy Briefings, which aim to raise awareness of a policy issue and contribute to the change needed.

Other strategies employed to ensure an impact beyond the usual metrics include:

- working with our authors on speedy publication times via our Shorts programme (see page 55)
- partnerships with societies and associations who share our beliefs and social mission within our fields of publication

British Society of Gerontology

SPA
SOCIAL POLICY ASSOCIATION

European Social Work Research Association

- submission of our books and authors to prizes, thereby demonstrating their value and impact
- making our books and journals available Open Access to ensure they are accessible to the widest possible audiences (see page 10)
- working with our authors to support the impact work they do and celebrating their successes.

You can read more about our work on impact, along with case studies of how we have made a difference, on our website:

Science, Technology and Society

The relationship between science, technology and society has emerged as one of the most profound global issues of the 21st century. Original perspectives and approaches are needed for mapping new terrains from the political and economic implications of big data, to the disruption of 'the human' via biological and technological enhancements.

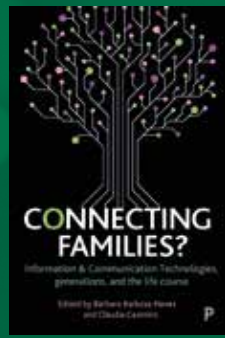

Our most recent list seeks to publish theoretical and empirical work in the form of monographs, high-quality edited collections and 'scholarly trade' titles which connect big academic ideas with general readers.

Data in Society Challenging Statistics in an Age of Globalisation

Edited by Jeff Evans, Middlesex University, Sally Ruane, De Montfort University and Humphrey Southall, University of Portsmouth

"A fascinating snapshot of how data and statistics are being used to understand and address modern social problems."

EMILY CLOUGH,
NEWCASTLE UNIVERSITY

Analysing the explosion of data sources, global trends and the changing role of the state, the economy, and healthcare provision, this book addresses controversies in data construction, analysis, dissemination, and access ownership. The authors examine the power of data to shape everyday socio-political discourse, its use by private and governmental organisations, the media and politicians, and the important role of statistics in exposing injustices and shaping social progress.

Economics and Society

Our Economics and Society list specialises in high-impact work that speaks to contemporary issues. Recent highlights have included The Lies We Were Told by Simon Wren-Lewis (with a preface by Nobel Prize winner Paul Krugman), and The Economics of Arrival by Katherine Trebeck and Jeremy Williams. This Autumn we are proud to be publishing Rethinking Britain, a vital intervention from some of the country's leading economic commentators.

Inclusive and interdisciplinary in spirit, we are interested in academic and popular books which address global social challenges such as economic inequality, ecological change and the emergence of alternative economic systems.

Rethinking Britain

Policy Ideas for the Many

Edited by Sue Konzelmann, Birkbeck, University of London, Susan Himmelweit, The Open University, Jeremy Smith, PRIME and John Weeks, SOAS University of London

"In the face of climate and social breakdown we urgently need new public policy ideas. 'Rethinking Britain' has them in wonderful, creative and powerful bucketfuls."

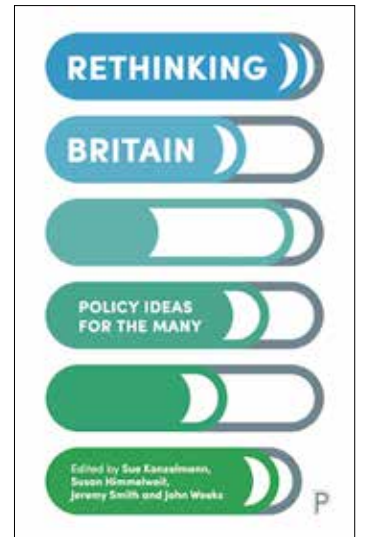

PAUL CHATTERTON, UNIVERSITY OF LEEDS

What if we had a government prepared to implement the policies that could radically change 21st century Britain and improve people's lives?

Social and economic policies are rarely communicated clearly to the public, but it's never been more important for citizens to understand and contribute to the debate around the country's future.

In everyday language, Rethinking Britain presents a range of ideas from some of the country's most influential thinkers such as Kate Pickett and Ha-Joon Chang. From inflation to tax, and health to education, each contribution offers solutions which, if implemented, would lead to a fairer society.

Curated by leading economists from the Progressive Economics Group and accompanied by a 'jargon buster', this book is an essential aid for citizens who are interested in critiquing inequalities while looking to build a better future.

Redeeming Leadership

An Anti-Racist Feminist Intervention

Helena Liu, University of Technology, Sydney

How might imperialist and masculinist grips on leadership be loosened? In this thought-provoking and accessible new study, Helena Liu suggests that anti-racist feminism can challenge conventional models and practices of power. Theoretically rigorous, with examples from around the world, it states the case for a bold reimagining of leadership.

BRISTOL SHORTS RESEARCH

Based on up-to-date qualitative and ethnographic research, the authors examine youth education-to-work transitions in the UK. Using a Foucauldian theoretical approach, the authors demonstrate how different employability schemes work in practice, revealing the tension between employability and good quality employment. They also consider the ways in which young people from varying social and regional backgrounds are positioned very differently.

Sociology

Our publishing in Sociology, with its foundations in social justice, public sociology and ethnographic research, continues to extend into new areas, covering key issues for society and global social challenges from migration through to changes in the world of work. Some of our core and expanding areas include digital sociology, equality and diversity, social movements and sociology of culture.

We publish across all formats and our 21st Century Standpoints series (pages 30 and 31) brings pressing public issues to a wide readership, shaping public conversations at this time of social, political, economic and cultural disruption. The titles move beyond simple critique to propose better ways of understanding, and living in, our world.

The Class Ceiling Why it Pays to be Privileged

Sam Friedman, London School of Economics and Political Science and Daniel Laurison, Swarthmore College

Politicians continually tell us that anyone can get ahead. But is that really true? This important best-selling book takes readers behind the closed doors of elite employers to reveal how class affects who gets to the top. Friedman and Laurison show that a powerful 'class pay gap' exists in Britain's elite occupations.

Drawing on 175 interviews across four case studies – television, accountancy, architecture and acting – they explore the complex barriers facing the upwardly mobile. This is a rich, ambitious book that demands we take seriously not just the glass but also the class ceiling.

"One of the most insightful works on the dynamics of inequality since Pickett and Wilkinson's The Spirit Level a decade ago"

The End of Aspiration? Social Mobility and Our Children's Fading Prospects

Duncan Exley, former Director of the Equality Trust

Why is it getting harder to secure a job that matches our qualifications, buy a home of our own and achieve financial stability? Underprivileged people have always faced barriers, but people from middle-income families are increasingly more likely to slide down the social scale than climb up.

Duncan Exley draws on expert research and real-life experiences – from an actor, a politician, a billionaire entrepreneur and a surgeon – to issue a wake-up call to break through segregated opportunity. He offers a manifesto to reboot our prospects and benefit all.

"Full of personal stories and heart-breaking facts showing how far we are from every child starting out with an equal chance. But read Duncan Exley for the remedies that could give us hope."

21st Century Standpoints series

Series Editors: Les Back, Goldsmiths, University of London, Pam Cox, University of Essex and Nasar Meer, University of Edinburgh

Accessible, social and political commentary from Policy Press and the British Sociological Association.

What are the 21st century challenges shaping our lives today and in the future? This exciting series showcases lively, disruptive, progressive writers who reach beyond the academy. Cosmopolitan in vision and scope, included works are based on striking ideas and robust evidence, providing a powerful platform for both scholarly and public debate.

Money Myths, Truths and Alternatives

Mary Mellor, Northumbria University

"Mary Mellor is one of our pre-eminent monetary myth-busters. Once again she has challenged us to break the lazy clichés about money and to truly reimagine our monetary horizons."

BRETT SCOTT, AUTHOR OF THE HERETIC'S GUIDE TO GLOBAL FINANCE

"Exciting, funny, and strategically designed to undercut the orthodoxy. Tax, savings, debt... Mary Mellor has got it right!"

WENDY OLSEN, UNIVERSITY OF MANCHESTER

"An exciting read for anyone interested in thinking differently about economics."

CHRISTINE BAUHARDT, HUMBOLDT-UNIVERSITÄT ZU BERLIN

What does money mean? Where does it come from and how does it work?

Mary Mellor examines money's social, political and commercial histories to debunk longstanding myths such as money being in short supply and needing to come from somewhere.

She sets out a new finance system, based on green and feminist concerns, to bring radical change for social good.

What's Wrong with Work?

Lynne Pettinger, University of Warwick

"A smart, compelling, and thoughtful exploration of what work is (and what the definition of 'work' should include) and how it might be made more ethical."

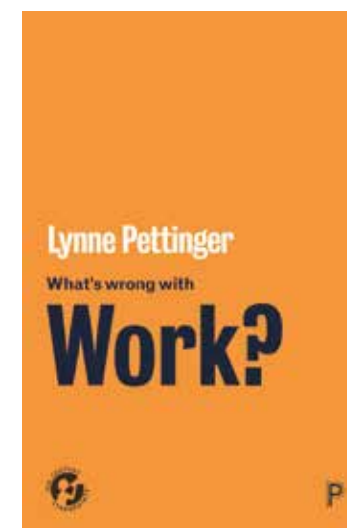

ERIN HATTON, UNIVERSITY AT BUFFALO

"In asking us to go beyond the autonomous, independent, rational, self-interested worker, Pettinger furnishes an astounding insight: think of work as care. In the end, work is nothing but a caring and relational engagement with the human and nonhuman world. Isn't individual survival meaningless without collective survival?"

A. ANEESH, AUTHOR OF NEUTRAL ACCENT: HOW LANGUAGE, LIFE AND LABOR BECOME GLOBAL

As changes occur in how work is organised across the globe, What's Wrong with Work shows that how workers are treated has wide implications beyond the lives of workers themselves.

Recognising gender, race, class and global differences, the book looks at three kinds of increasingly important work – green work, IT work and the 'gig' economy. It considers the ways formal work is often dependent on informal work, especially domestic work and care work and concludes by considering what might make work better, arguing that there is a collective responsibility to address bad work.

Social Innovation

How Societies Find the Power to Change

Geoff Mulgan, Nesta

"Based on the vast experience and insightful expertise of Geoff Mulgan, this book not only discusses the potential and limits of social innovation but, more importantly, showcases how all sectors can best embed its principles to address the most pressing challenges of our century."

ISABEL MOTA, CALOUSTE GULBENKIAN FOUNDATION

"This book gives to a wide audience what some of us have been privileged to hear from Mulgan in person: the reflections of a profound thinker who is charting new territory in social innovation, demonstrating how we can rise to the most complex challenges of our era."

STEPHEN HUDDART, THE MCCONNELL FOUNDATION

The 21st century has brought a cornucopia of new knowledge and technologies. But there has been little progress in our ability to solve social problems across the globe.

Geoff Mulgan is a pioneer in the global field of social innovation. Building on his experience advising international governments, businesses and foundations, he explains how it provides answers to today's global social, economic and sustainability issues. He argues for matching R&D in technology and science with a socially focused R&D and harnessing creative imagination on a larger scale than ever before.

Weaving together history, ideas, policy and practice, he shows how social innovation is now coming of age, offering a comprehensive view of what can be done to solve the global social challenges we face.

"Mulgan's wide-ranging vision and extensive experience are on display in this whirlwind tour of the prospects and challenges facing social innovators. Enjoy the ride!"

Critical Dialogues

Thinking Together in Turbulent Times

John Clarke, The Open University

John Clarke is in conversation with 12 leading international scholars from across the social sciences – voices that have inspired many of us – from political theory (Wendy Brown) to social policy (Fiona Williams), from geography (Wendy Larner) to anthropology (Anu Sharma). An influential book destined to stand the test of time, it explores the ways that everyday conversation is intrinsic to our way of thinking critically, collaboratively and dialogically both within and beyond academia.

"Ideas come iteratively: our ways of thinking are formed and developed in conversation with each other. This book shows how that process works, and why it works so well in talking to John Clarke."

Law

Our growing law list seeks work that engages with current social problems and explores the way the law is responding, or failing to respond, to these problems in a global context. This list focuses on justice and rights, exploring the way the law works to protect the things that are most important to our society. It encourages readers to engage with current global issues and key areas of current academic debate.

We publish across all formats and, as part of our commitment to impact, we also publish Policy Briefings alongside our books to allow your research to be read and understood by a wider audience.

Law and Society in a Populist Age

Balancing Individual Rights and the Common Good

Amitai Etzioni, George Washington University

JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY EUROPEAN STUDIES

Amitai Etzioni, one of the most respected thinkers in the US, argues for a new liberal communitarian approach as an effective response to populism.

The book considers the core challenges in contexts including national security versus privacy, private sector responsibility, freedom of the press, campaign for finance reform, regulatory law and the legal status of terrorists. It offers a timely discussion of the relationship of the law to the citizen in a fast-changing environment.

Studies in Social Harm series

Series Editors: Christina Pantazis, University of Bristol and, Simon Pemberton, University of Birmingham and, Steve Tombs, The Open University

Studies in Social Harm offers a fresh perspective on issues of social harm and moves the debate towards a holistic approach that seeks to understand the production of harm within contemporary society.

The Harms of Work An Ultra-Realist Account of the Service Economy

Anthony Lloyd, Teesside University

"Indispensable for academics, practitioners and policymakers interested in the harms associated with contemporary service work. A compelling and thought-provoking read."

SAM SCOTT, UNIVERSITY OF GLOUCESTERSHIRE

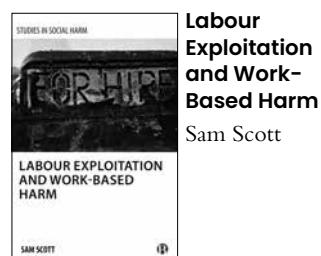

Reconnecting ideology and political economy with workplace studies, this is the first book to discuss workplace harm through an ultra-realist lens. Lloyd examines the connection between individuals, their working conditions and management culture.

The book investigates the reorganisation of labour markets and the shift from security to flexibility, using examples of legal and illegal activity to demonstrate the multiple harms within the service economy.

Understanding Human Need

Hartley Dean, London School of Economics and Political Science

This second edition of a widely-respected textbook is one of the few resources available to provide an overview of human need, as a key concept in the social sciences. Taking an approach encompassing both global North and South, this accessible and engaging book models existing practical and theoretical approaches to human need while also proposing a radical alternative.

Incorporating crucial current debates and illustrations, the author explores:

- distinctions between different types and levels of need
- how different approaches are reflected in different sorts of policy goals
- debates about the relationship between needs, rights and welfare
- contested thinking about needs in relation to caring, disadvantage and humanity.

Fully revised and updated, this new edition pays due regard to the shifting nature of welfare ideologies and welfare regimes. Offering essential insights for students of social policy, it will also be of interest to other social science disciplines, policymakers and political activists.

The Divisive State of Social Policy

The 'Bedroom Tax', Austerity and Housing Insecurity

Edited by Kelly Bogue, Coventry University

The 'Bedroom Tax' was one of the most contentious aspects of the UK government's austerity politics. Combining detailed policy analysis with personal stories from a housing estate, the author traces the links between Housing Benefit reforms and inequality, and examines how the Tax has contributed to housing insecurity, poverty and damage to social networks.

"Shows very clearly how grossly damaging, unnecessary and unfair policies can be completely misrepresented as necessary, just and fair."

Gender Mainstreaming and Gender Equality in Europe

Policies, Culture and Public Opinion

Vera Lomazzi, GESIS Leibniz Institute for Social Sciences and Isabella Crespi, University of Macerata

POLICY PRESS SHORTS RESEARCH

At a time of intense debate about gender attitudes and equality, this is a much-needed review of the pan-European impacts of the theory of gender mainstreaming. The book explores the origins and evolution of the concept, compares and contrasts its influence on legislation, culture and opinions around Europe, and considers its limits in the face of economic and migration challenges.

"Will enrich academics with new knowledge on legislative aspects of gender equality and make policymakers more familiar with individual attitudes to gender equality and country specifics."

Shorts

Our Shorts are between 25–50,000 words and are available as eBooks and in print with a shorter production schedule. Written by experts in their fields, these formats provide high-quality, peer-reviewed content quickly and are available for both personal purchase and for libraries and institutions through the usual channels.

We publish two types of Shorts under both Bristol University Press and Policy Press:

Shorts Research

Providing the latest cutting-edge or topical research findings (longer than an article but shorter than a monograph), published in hardback, with a lower priced eBook which allows for individual purchase.

Shorts Insights

Covering issues of wide interest and where a timely intervention is likely to attract media coverage and reach a broad non-specialist audience, these accessibly-written Shorts enable authors to join the debate authoritatively and quickly and are published as low-price paperbacks and eBooks.

Policy Press also publish the following Shorts:

Shorts Policy & Practice

As part of our commitment to impact and engaging with a wider audience, we also publish 'Policy & Practice' Shorts where there is support with dissemination through Open Access, organisational links, course buy-in or other direct routes to the policy and practice audience.

If you are interested in publishing your next project as a Short, please see our website bristoluniversitypress.co.uk/shorts for more details or contact the relevant subject editor.

Research Methods, Evidence and Impact

How knowledge is generated and evidence disseminated and used are pressing questions for our time. With our Research Methods programme, we aim to publish books that give readers the tools they need, whether practical or critical, case-study based or synoptic. Our fast-growing list reflects our interests in questions of participation and engagement, creativity and innovation, interdisciplinarity and practice relevance and impact.

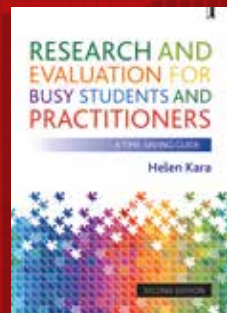

We welcome new proposals which aim to support the development of new research. Our aim is to publish relevant and thought-provoking work of high quality for a diverse international readership.

How to Use Social Work Theory in Practice

An Essential Guide

Malcolm Payne, Manchester Metropolitan University

Best-selling author Malcolm Payne clearly condenses the practical features of social work theory, without oversimplifying them, enabling both students and practitioners to confidently apply theoretical ideas to their practice work from first to last contact. This essential, highly accessible, 'action guide' makes vital connections between classic and contemporary movements in the field and features an array of useful resources to aid continuous learning, including:

- 25 Infographics that clearly summarise key information
- Helpful chapter-by-chapter tools for review
- 'Things to think about' sections which connect firmly back to real-world practice

"This concise text will serve as a first stop for social work students and practitioners eager to learn about the most commonly used social work skills, theories and methods."

Reassessing Attachment Theory in Child Welfare

Sue White, University of Sheffield, Matthew Gibson, University of Birmingham, David Wastell, University of Nottingham and Patricia Walsh, Trinity College Dublin

Offering an important analysis of the limitations of child attachment for the basis of decision-making in child welfare practice, the authors unpack the controversies related to increasing diagnoses of 'attachment disorder' and attachment-specific therapies for children in care. They call for a new pedagogy more considerate of migrant families, refugees, adoptive and surrogate children and families in poverty.

Child Sexual Exploitation

Why Theory Matters

Edited by Jenny Pearce, University of Bedfordshire

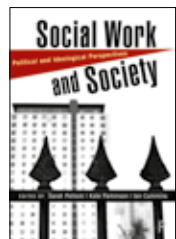

High-profile cases of Child Sexual Exploitation (CSE) have brought the issue under the spotlight in the UK, but they have also resulted in a reactive approach to service development. This book makes the case for greater use of theoretical perspectives in the development and delivery of strategies and includes theories of gender, racism, poverty and deprivation. A key resource to help practitioners properly understand how CSE arises and how to challenge this abuse.

"A topical and much needed resource reflecting research, theory, practice and experience of child sexual exploitation, violence and trafficking. It will be welcomed by practitioners and policymakers alike."

Social Work and Society Political and Ideological Perspectives

Edited by Sarah Pollock, Manchester Metropolitan University, Kate Parkinson and Ian Cummins, University of Salford

This contemporary textbook provides a comprehensive introduction to politics in social work, unifying the themes of political ideology and social construction across social work practice. An essential resource for all students in social work, it bridges the gap between political and ideological perspectives on social welfare and the social problems, experiences and contexts that social workers deal with at grassroots level.

Research and the Social Work Picture

Ian Shaw, University of York

"Each gem of a chapter brings together deep wisdom that recognizes the particularities of time, space, and place in the shaping of multiple social work practices."

BARBARA LEVY SIMON, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

Using evidence from Europe, Asia and the USA, Ian Shaw explores how research in social work is conducted, used and perceived. Perfect for students, researchers and practitioners, the book helps social workers to become more thoughtfully practical – and practically thoughtful.

Social Media and Social Work Implications and Opportunities for Practice

Edited by Claudia Megele, Wiltshire Council and Peter Buzzi, psychotherapist and international consultant

Social media brings both ethical and practical tensions for social workers and service users. Using real-life examples, this book provides helpful principles that can be applied in practice and in education to enable practitioners to use social media effectively and assess the impact of social media on professional conduct and public confidence.

Children, Young People and Families

Our publishing seeks to shed light on the pressing issues facing children and families today, particularly in a context of rising levels of poverty and inequality. Some of our books challenge current policy and practice via the latest research, whilst others offer straightforward practical guidance to those working with children and young people in often difficult circumstances.

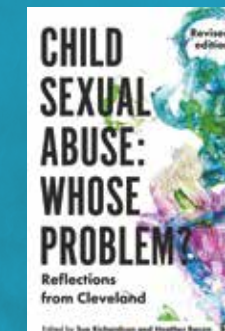

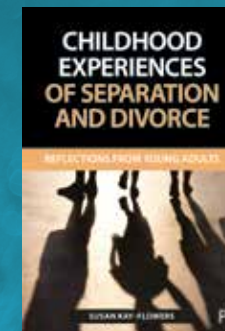

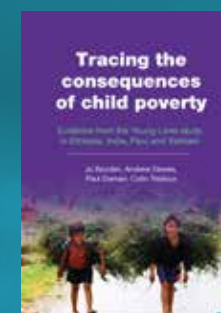

Titles range from bestselling textbooks and critical monographs to peer-reviewed journals. We welcome proposals from across the field, with particular interest in work on children and young people's participation.

Children Framing Childhoods

Working-Class Kids' Visions of Care

Wendy Luttrell, City University of New York

"Wendy Luttrell has given us a gem that will innovate critical childhood studies for years to come. This book takes us on an intimate journey across time and images, claiming space for children's carework."

LAUREN J SILVER, RUTGERS UNIVERSITY-CAMDEN

"Challenges the deficit models of working-class children by asking them to tell us what is important to know about school and home. Demonstrating their ways of doing care work offers adults lessons on how to create a caring environment and offers hope for the future of our country."

MARY ROMERO, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN SOCIOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

Urban educational research, practice and policy is preoccupied with problems, brokenness, stigma and blame. As a result, too many people are unable to recognise the capacities and desires of children and youth growing up in working-class communities.

Children Framing Childhoods offers an alternative angle of vision, showing how a community of diverse young people in Worcester, MA used cameras at age 10, 12, 16 and 18 to acknowledge the centrality of care in their lives, homes and classrooms.

Based on a unique longitudinal participatory research project using innovative visual research methods and illustrated in full colour with the children's photographs, it allows the young people to challenge misconceptions of their lives and schools as broken and damaged.

Child Poverty

Aspiring to Survive

Morag C. Treanor, University of Edinburgh

Measuring child poverty is vital to how governments act to prevent, alleviate or eliminate it, yet it is often misrepresented in policy and media discourses both in the UK and cross-nationally. This book places children at the centre of its analysis of poor children and their families, dispelling common myths and misconceptions whilst providing an examination of the causes and consequences of child poverty in the developed world.

Education

Equal access to education, regardless of race, class, gender, sexuality or geography, is essential in tackling increasing levels of social inequality. Reflecting our background, our list focuses on education policy and politics, and asks key questions around the way we educate, how the system exacerbates and perpetuates existing inequality, and what can be done to improve access and outcomes for the benefit of all.

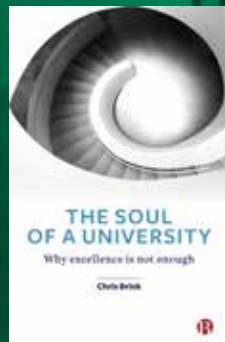

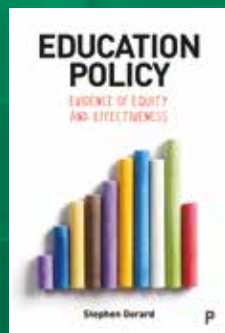

Across the list you will find a range of books for students, academics and policymakers, alongside a growing number of accessibly written titles aimed at the general interested reader, including the best-selling Miseducation by Diane Reay.

Too Hot to Handle? The Democratic Challenge of Climate Change

Rebecca Willis, Lancaster University

BRISTOL SHORTS INSIGHTS

Drawing on interviews with politicians and activists, this timely book provides an in-depth comparative analysis of international climate policies and examines how we can build impactful democratic solutions to climate change.

The author confronts the difficulties of fitting the climate change agenda into the current political system, including how to make it a voter priority, whilst proposing practical ways forward for climate change politics.

"If politicians know the seriousness of the climate crisis, why don't they act? This highly readable book explains."

Uganda and the UK

Kristina Diprose and Gill Valentine,
University of Sheffield, Robert M.
Vanderbeck and Katie McQuaid,
University of Leeds and Chen Liu,
Sun Yat-Sen University

BRISTOL SHORTS RESEARCH

Based on a cross-national, cross-generational and community-based research project on climate change and consumption with urban residents in China, Uganda and the UK, this book examines how different cultures think about past, present and future responsibility for climate change. Expanding beyond perspectives from the Global North, it considers how to build sustainable societies given the common but differentiated responsibilities for climate change across different cultures.

"Empirically rich, this book argues for sustained engagement between grassroots and policy-level actors to mitigate climate change. The notion of 'unimagining the future' reveals how everyday injustice impedes environmental citizenship."

Understanding Super Diversity in Deprived and Mixed Neighbourhoods

Edited by Stijn Oosterlynck and Gert Verschraegen, University of Antwerp and the late Ronald van Kempen, Utrecht University

This edited collection provides a comparative international perspective on superdiversity in cities, focusing on social inequality and social exclusion on a neighbourhood level. Highlighting the active and creative ways in which residents come together, the book uncovers how national and local contexts shape living in diversity.

"A timely and international comparative analysis of diversity, crucially showing that diversity does not deserve its negative connotation. Everyone concerned about diversity in contemporary cities should read this book."

Imagining Regulation Differently

Co-creating for Engagement

"An excellent book, which deserves to be widely read by all those involved in public policy and regulation."

HELEN SULLIVAN, AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL UNIVERSITY

Edited by Morag McDermont and Tim Cole, University of Bristol, Janet Newman, The Open University and Angela Piccini, University of Bristol

There is an urgent need to rethink the relationships between systems of government and those who are 'governed'. The contemporary transfer of state regulation to the market-based regulation of corporate interests has marginalised many communities in the regulatory systems of everyday life.

Exploring a broad range of intersecting areas including immigration, social work, food regulation, space and surveillance, older people, ethnicity and faith, this book takes a 'bottom up' approach that brings to the fore the experiences and expertise of these communities in order to examine ways that we can better design regulatory systems that support the knowledge and creativity of citizens.

Using Evidence to End Homelessness

Edited by Lígia Teixeira and James Cartwright, Centre for Homelessness Impact

In the UK, the average lifespan of a homeless person is just 47, yet still policymakers fail to adequately address the problem. Contributions from a bipartisan group of government leaders, academics, radical thinkers and activists outline a new way to tackle homelessness using an evidence-based approach, underpinned by robust evidence instead of political whim or expedience.

Urban Policy, Planning and the Built Environment series

Series Editors: Pierre Filion, University of Waterloo, Nicole Gurran, University of Sydney, and Nick Gallent, Bartlett School of Planning, UCL

This international series examines the interdisciplinary dimensions of urbanism and the built environment. It critically analyses the challenges confronting cities at the intersection between markets, public policy and the built environment, as well as the responses emerging from these challenges.

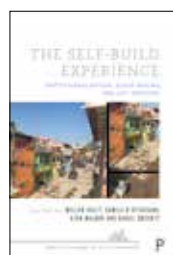

Rescaling Urban Governance Planning, Localism and Institutional Change

John Sturzaker and Alex Nurse, University of Liverpool

Unprecedented pressure from climate change, migration, ageing populations and resource shortages demands new research and thinking about cities, their governance and planning reform. This book provides a radical response, examining global examples of cutting-edge policy experimentation and innovation designed to guarantee a sustainable future.

The Self-Build Experience Institutionalization, Place-Making and City Building

Edited by Willem Salet, University of Amsterdam, Camila L. D'Ottaviano, University of São Paulo, Stan Majoor, Amsterdam University of Applied Sciences and Daniel Bossuyt, University of Amsterdam

Spanning multiple countries across South America, Europe and Africa, this book investigates the phenomenon of self-building for low and middle income groups in urban areas. It explores the tension between governance and self-regulation, considering how this relationship can be optimised to create more socially sustainable forms of urbanisation, and argues for a rethinking of the moral and managerial ownership of the city.

Planning and Knowledge How New Forms of Technocracy are Shaping Contemporary Cities

Edited by Mike Raco, Bartlett School of Planning, UCL and Federico Savini, University of Amsterdam

"An important contribution to the understanding of contemporary politics and urban development."

ROB IMRIE, GOLDSMITHS, UNIVERSITY OF LONDON

This book examines the different landscapes of knowledge driving contemporary urban change, as systems of regulation and control are subjected to unprecedented pressures from multiple directions. It reflects on the shift in power relations between expert and local cultures in planning processes, examining its disruptive effect on the traditional separation between public, private and voluntary sectors.

Creating Community-Led and Self-Build Homes A Guide to Collaborative Practice in the UK

Martin Field, De Montfort University

POLICY PRESS SHORTS POLICY & PRACTICE

"An invaluable, up-to-date overview of the sector."

BOB COLENUTT, OXFORD BROOKES UNIVERSITY

Exploring the ways in which people and communities across the UK strive to create the homes and neighbourhood communities they want, this book examines 'self-build housing' and 'community-led housing'. Giving context to contemporary practices in the UK, it discusses the commonalities and distinctions between these in practice, and what could be learned from other initiatives across Europe.

Policy Press Scholarship Online
(which includes Bristol University Press titles)

policypress.universitypressscholarship.com

"What a wonderful resource! Nice layout and ready access to chapters and descriptions. So many tempting books to purchase or access via library subscription."

ROS BURNETT, UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

Policy Press Scholarship Online (PPSO) is our digital monograph collection, in partnership with Oxford University Press. The collection provides access to over 600 scholarly titles in a variety of subject areas, including Sociology, Law, Criminology, Business and Management, Politics and International Relations, Social Work, Public Health and Epidemiology. This collection of high-quality academic monographs is an essential research resource for students and academics alike.

PPSO streamlines the research process by making disparately published scholarship easily accessible, highly discoverable, and fully cross-searchable via one online platform. PPSO greatly enhances the ability for our publishing to be found and used by academics globally.

Longitudinal and Life Course Studies

Volume 10 | 2019, 4 issues

Impact Factor: 0.911

Executive Editor: Heather Joshi, Institute of Education, UCL, UK

Section Editors: Behavioural Sciences and Development: Jeylan Mortimer, University of Minnesota, USA;

Health and Population Sciences: Scott Montgomery, Örebro University Hospital and Örebro University, Sweden;

Social and Economic Sciences: Peter Elias, University of Warwick, UK;

Statistical Sciences and Methodology: Marc Scott, New York University, USA

Published in association with the Society for Longitudinal and Life Course Studies.

SLLS Society for Longitudinal and Life Course Studies

"Longitudinal and Life Course Studies provides a much-needed outlet for high quality interdisciplinary research on the life course. No other journal offers life course researchers as wide a range of disciplines, topics, and methods."

MARY CLARE LENNON, CITY UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, USA

Longitudinal and Life Course Studies (LLCS) is a peer-reviewed journal dedicated to the needs of researchers studying the life course and using longitudinal methods at the interfaces of social, developmental and health sciences. It fosters cross-disciplinary and international endeavours and promotes the creation and exploitation of longitudinal data resources as well as their application to policy issues.

As the journal of the Society for Longitudinal and Life Course Studies (SLLS) it provides an opportunity for scholars at all stages of their careers to publish work crossing disciplinary boundaries which is often beyond the scope of more conventional, single-field journals.

Included in Social Sciences Citation Index.

Global Discourse:

An Interdisciplinary Journal of Current Affairs

Volume 9 | 2019, 4 issues

Editor: Matthew Johnson, Lancaster University, UK

Deputy Editors: Shannon Brincat, University of the Sunshine Coast, Australia;

Simon Mabon, Lancaster University, UK

North American Consultative Editor: Debra L. DeLaet, Drake University, USA

"Global Discourse provides a valuable platform for the exploration and dissemination of the critical issues shaping our times. It should be read by everybody seeking originality, insight and reflection in exploring the key challenges faced by society from the global to the local contexts."

CATHAL O'CONNELL, UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CORK, IRELAND

Global Discourse is an interdisciplinary, problem-oriented journal of applied contemporary thought operating at the intersection of politics, international relations, sociology and social policy. The Journal's scope is broad, encouraging interrogation of current affairs with regard to core questions of distributive justice, wellbeing, cultural diversity, autonomy, sovereignty, security and recognition.

All issues are themed and aimed at addressing pressing issues as they emerge. Rejecting the notion that publication is the final stage in the research process, Global Discourse seeks to foster discussion and debate between often artificially isolated disciplines and paradigms, with responses to articles encouraged and conversations continued across issues.

Emotions and Society

Volume 1 | 2019, 2 issues

Editors-in-Chief: Mary Holmes, University of Edinburgh, UK;

Åsa Wettergren, Gothenburg University, Sweden

Co-Editor: Nathan Manning, University of Adelaide, Australia

"A very valuable addition to sociology and the study of society... edited by a highly qualified team it has already attracted groundbreaking articles on the various interactions and relationships between emotions, individuals and their societies."

BENET DAVETIAN, UNIVERSITY OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, CANADA

Emotions and Society aims to publish high-quality, original, peer-reviewed articles which advance theoretical and empirical understanding of emotions in social life. It is associated with the European Sociological Association Research Network on the Sociology of Emotions and seeks submissions from a wide range of international authors writing in this area. The sociology of emotions has developed unique perspectives on emotions that attend to their social construction and the ways in which they are embedded in social structures and inherent in social processes.

The Journal seeks to expand the largely unexhausted potential for developing innovative approaches not only to emotions per se, but to the social generally. All methodological approaches to studying emotions are welcome, but they should demonstrate rigour and be framed in ways that will be of interest to sociologically inclined scholars.

Consulting Editors: Lynn Chancer, Hunter College and CUNY Graduate Center, USA; Stephen Frosh, Birkbeck, University of London, UK;

Paul Hoggett, University of the West of England, UK;

Neil McLaughlin, McMaster University, Canada

Regional Editors: Matt Bowker, Medaille College, USA;

Steffen Krueger, University of Oslo, Norway

Published in association with The Association for Psychosocial Studies

"A much needed place to animate and inspire others in the field of psychosocial research and writing – a plenum of innovative ideas about clinical and critical theory, contemporary hermeneutics, and social philosophy."

CLAUDE BARBRE, CHICAGO SCHOOL OF PROFESSIONAL PSYCHOLOGY, USA

The Journal of Psychosocial Studies publishes work that falls within the broad transdisciplinary area of Psychosocial Studies, defined by a commitment to understanding the significance of the links between internal and external worlds. Psychosocial Studies draws on a range of disciplines to explore the interactive relationships between self, culture and society.

As the adopted journal of The Association for Psychosocial Studies (APS) it especially seeks to promote work that is interdisciplinary and considers issues of practice. The Journal of Psychosocial Studies provides space for research and writing that crosses the traditional boundaries between disciplines in the social sciences, humanities and the arts.

 John J. Wallis, University of Maryland, USA;
 Barry R. Weingast, Stanford University, USA;
 Ronald Wintrobe, Western University, Canada

“New technology and dynamic editorial talent mark both the return of the Journal of Public Finance and Public Choice and a significant milestone in the history of transoceanic cooperation between scholars of Public Finance and Public Choice.”

J.R. CLARK, UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE AT CHATTANOOGA, USA

The Journal of Public Finance and Public Choice (JPFPC) was founded in 1983 by Professor Domenico da Empoli in the spirit of the Italian discipline of Scienza delle finanze. According to this approach, economic analysis should include individual motivations in non-market settings, political institutions, and collective decision-making.

Relaunched in 2018 in partnership with Bristol University Press, JPFPC is unique in the international landscape of public economics journals because it is committed to explicitly advancing knowledge in both public finance and public choice, reflecting an inclusive approach.
