The Crosland legacy

The future of British social democracy

Patrick Diamond, Queen Mary University of London

“This book will be read with hunger by all those who feel the left has lost its way.” David Lipsey, socialist peer and adviser to Anthony Crosland 1972–76

In this timely book, Patrick Diamond considers a wide range of Crosland’s writings on the economy and politics, relating his ideas on egalitarian social democracy, electoral strategy, the European question, and the importance of progressive liberalism on the British centre–left.

Substance not spin

An insider’s view of success and failure in government

Nick Raynsford, Former MP and Government Minister

Why does policy succeed or fail? Nick Raynsford, a former MP, Minister and campaigner, tells us how it looks from the front line of policymaking. The book explores what works and what doesn’t in making and implementing policy and legislation, giving an ‘insider’s view’ on a range of events.

Kill it to save it

The triumph of capitalism over American democracy

Corey Dolgon, Stonehill College, Massachusetts, USA

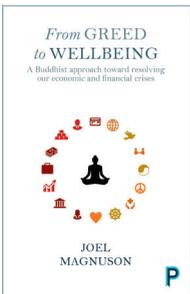

Documents the historical and theoretical story of capitalism’s triumph over democracy. Dolgon argues that Americans now accept “reforms” that destroy the public sector and a political culture that embraces what Stephen Colbert calls “truthiness” – arguments that feel right “in the gut” regardless of messy facts.

From greed to well being

A Buddhist approach toward resolving our economic and financial crises

Joel Magnuson, Portland Community College, USA

The global financial system seems caught in a cycle of boom and bust, instability and scandal. Building on the classic works of E F Schumacher, Prayudh Payutto and Sulak Sivaraksa, Magnuson provides a Buddhist economics perspective on this recurring pattern and offers new possibilities for real change.

Public management in transition

The orchestration of potentiality

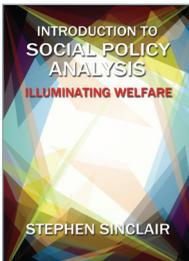

Niels Åkerstrøm Andersen and Justine Grønbaek Pors, Copenhagen Business School

Bridging traditional public management approaches that tend to exclude social and societal problems, with broader social theories apt to capture new dilemmas and challenges, the authors show how the effects of new forms of managerialism penetrate the state, local governments, welfare institutions as well as professional work and citizens' rights.

Locating localism

Statecraft, citizenship and democracy

Jane Wills, Queen Mary University of London

Combining political theory with attention to political practice, this book explores the development of localism as a new mode of statecraft and its implications for the practice of citizenship. It looks at the development of community organising, neighbourhood planning and community councils that identify and nurture the energies, talents and creativity of the population to solve their own problems and improve our world.

Morality and public policy

Clem Henricson, University of East Anglia

Spanning religion, moral philosophy and scientific understanding of the human condition, this unique book draws together and adds to the latest thinking on morality, its causes, mutations, tensions and common features. Challenging misplaced concepts of 'moral progress' and the supremacy of empathy, it presents proposals to enhance the capacity of public policy to respond more effectively to morality and associated shifts in social mores in different cultural settings.

A sharing economy

How social wealth funds can reduce inequality and help balance the books

Stewart Lansley, University of Bristol

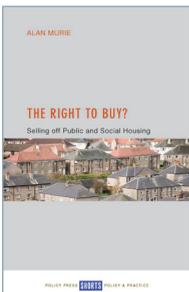

Could social wealth funds reduce inequality and tackle austerity? A Sharing Economy proposes radical new ways to close the UK's growing income gap and spread social opportunities. A social wealth fund would boost economic and social investment and simultaneously strengthen the public finances. Offering a powerful antidote to austerity, this is a fascinating topical contribution to current debates about social economics.

Housing politics in the United Kingdom

Power, planning and protest

Brian Lund, Manchester Metropolitan University

Housing in the UK is considered a complex and open-ended issue. Using insights from public choice theory, the new institutionalism and social constructionism Housing Politics in the United Kingdom locates the contemporary 'housing question' in historically entrenched power relationships involving markets, planning, and territorial electoral politics. It is written to complement the 3rd edition of the author's bestselling Understanding housing policy (publishing in 2017).

Veiled threats

Representing the Muslim woman in public policy discourses

Naaz Rashid, University of Manchester

As Muslim women continue to be a focus of media-led debate, Naaz Rashid uses original scholarship and empirical research to examine how Muslim women are represented in policy discourse and how the trope of the Muslim woman is situated within national debates about Britishness, the death of multiculturalism and global concerns over international terrorism.

Australian public policy

Progressive ideas in the neoliberal ascendancy

Edited by Chris Miller and Lionel Orchard,
Flinders University

Australian public policy brings together leading authors to explore economic, environmental, social, cultural, political and indigenous issues. It examines trends and current policy directions and outlines progressive alternatives that challenge and extend current thinking. While focused on Australia, the contributors offer valuable insights for people in other countries committed to social justice and those engaged in the ongoing contest between neo-liberalism and social democracy.
